A Brief History of Waterford

Waterford was settled in 1733 by Amos Janney, a Quaker from Bucks County, Pennsylvania. Janney was soon followed by others and Waterford became the thriving center of a community of small farms. Because the Quakers were grain farmers, a grist mill was very important to them, and the first settlement included a mill near the site of the present structure with a few houses clustered nearby. The settlement that would become Waterford grew around Janney's Mill. From the 1760s onward, Presbyterians, Methodists and Baptists would also establish a presence here.

A few residents took part in the Revolutionary War; surprisingly, not all Quakers who saw service contrary to the Quaker principles on nonviolence were read out of Meeting. After the Revolution, Waterford grew rapidly with a wide variety of businesses, and by the 1830s, Joseph Martin's Gazeteer wrote:

Waterford contains 70 dwelling houses, 2 houses of public worship, 1 free for all denominations, the other a Friends' meeting house, 6 mercantile stores, 2 free schools, 4 taverns, a manufacturing flour mill, and 1 saw, grist and plaister mill, and (in the vicinity) 2 small cotton manufactories. The mechanics are 1 tanner, 2 house joiners, 2 cabinet makers, 1 chair maker and painter, 1 boot and shoe manufacturer, 2 hatters, 1 tailor, &c. Population about 400 persons, of whom 2 are regular physicians.

The Quakers were joined by Scotch-Irish craftsmen from Pennsylvania who were responsible for much of the construction of the village.

While some early residents were slaveholders, the fact that Waterford had a thriving antebellum free Black community was unusual for pre-Civil War Virginia. Waterford's Quaker roots and the abolitionist sentiments of most Quakers may have encouraged Black settlement here.

Today, Waterford's buildings and rolling fields look much as they did 200 years ago. The village is a Loudoun County Historic and Cultural Conservation District.

Waterford and the Revolution: Looking Back 250 Years

Imagine yourself 250 years ago as the then English colonies on the coast of North America were heading towards revolution. Do you think of Massachusetts with the Minutemen and Paul Revere; or do you think about closer to home in Williamsburg and Patrick Henry's exclamation of

"give me liberty or give me death!"? While there were no Revolutionary battles or skirmishes known here in Loudoun, its residents still found themselves involved and impacted by the events and ideas of the Revolution during the eight years of the American Revolution and beyond, including here in Waterford.

The Waterford that would have heard the news of Patrick Henry's speech in Williamsburg looks different from the Village we know now. First off, if you were to ask someone in Loudoun where Waterford was at the time, they might be a bit confused. The name "Waterford" didn't start appearing until later in the century. People probably knew the area as "Janney's Mill," based on the mill and the road leading to the Village. Many of the landmark buildings we think of here were several decades away from construction, including the John Wesley Community Church, Corner Store, and Chair Factory. The Village had a population of approximately 150, mostly made up of Quakers coming from Pennsylvania and New Jersey as those colonies were filling up, including the influential Hague, Hough, and aforementioned Janney family. Scots-Irish immigrants, merchants, and craftsmen largely made up the rest.

So what was here during the Revolutionary War? As the name suggests, Janney's Mill was most known for milling wheat, making it part of the English colony's breadbasket. Mahlon Janney, son of original settler Amos Janney, had built his grist mill approximately twelve years prior and had placed a dam across the Catoctin Creek to shunt water to his mill and others. His mill would have most likely been somewhere near where the Waterford Mill stands today. Later on, he would also be responsible for the construction of the Schooley Mill before selling it to the Schooley family. Another note of this area's milling prowess comes in Francis Hague and John Hough. These two were among the first flour inspectors in Loudoun County.

The Waterford Foundation is proud to be involved with other history and historic preservation organizations in the County to plan the commemoration of the American Revolution!

SECOND STREET SCHOOL E on the map

OPEN ALL THREE DAYS
Special Presentation
Friday 10:00 & 11:30am

The one-room school on Second Street was built in 1867 to serve as a school and church for Waterford's African-American community. It is the second oldest one-room schoolhouse in Loudoun County.

The Second Street School program, staffed by volunteers, is offered at no charge to Loudoun County fourth grade classes. Approximately 1,500 students are registered each year. As of this year, more than 50,000 students have participated!

Best Demonstrating Artisan of 2024 Harriet Giles

Harriet Giles is a professional hand weaver who creates beautiful, historically-inspired and contemporary rag rugs. She taught herself to weave in 1973 and began weaving professionally in 1981.

Working near Slate Mills, Virginia, Harriet designs and weaves custom, room-size rugs on her wooden hand-loom, using the same techniques that weavers have used for centuries. Her work focuses on the sophisticated interplay of color, design, and woven structure. She cuts fabric into strips—including both floral and printed as well as solid fabrics—to achieve a rich color blend. She then weaves them into a groundwork of loom-controlled threads, creating unique rugs that range from densely warped bold stripes to subtle, intricate twills.

In addition to room-size rugs, Harriet also produces a line of smaller area and throw-size rugs, as well as totes.

Stop by her tent in the Bond Street Barn Area to see her unique woven creations and learn more about her work.

RAFFLE

Early American Document Box

A note from Kristin Helberg,
Donor of this Piece

Growing up in the York/Lancaster area of Pennsylvania, my mother took us along on her search for antiques for our old house. I remember seeing an old document box at an auction. That image stayed with me. As I recall, it was rather plain with some images of birds painted on it and it had wonderful bun feet.

I had my cabinet maker create two smaller reproductions of a document box with feet. Circling the box on all four sides is a diorama of trees and lawn, inspired by the murals of the early American painter, Rufus Porter. The sides are all hand painted with vinegar paint.

On the lid, I have created a fine house that would have existed in the Early American era. The entire box was then finished with a vinegar paint patina and varnished. I wanted the box to represent a glimpse into Early American life and art.

What will you keep in this box?
